

When a gay guy gets nabbed by the Sexual-Orientation-Police

* This was a thing in the '90s.

But I still hate being taken for straight.

In fact, I was

(and am) a GOLD STAR GAY

i.e. a gay man who's never had sex with a woman.

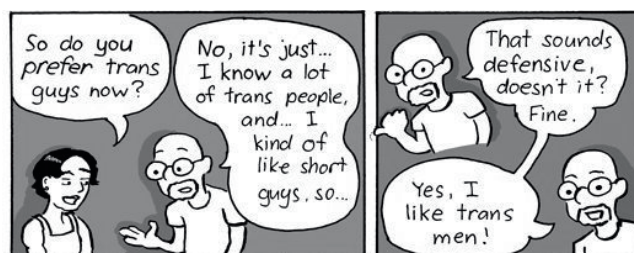

Because I've dated transgender guys (Three of my last four relationships have been with transmen) *

I... may have a thing for short guys.

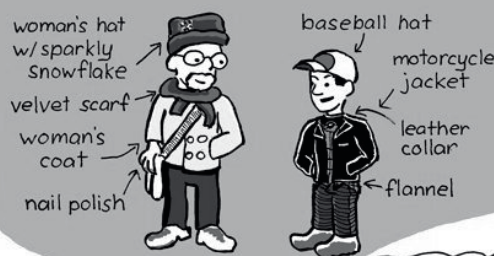

*Men who were assigned 'female' at birth, felt that didn't fit, and transitioned to 'male'.

My libido has its own criteria for when it responds.

A lot of trans men are butcher than I am.

But being with them causes some people to question my orientation. This can be a simple mis-gendering mistake:

(or possibly my own paranoia.)

But sometimes it's like the Orientation Police are on patrol.

These are mostly clueless straight people:
